THREE DEAD OF BURNS.

Fatal Lamp Explosion in Hagerstown, Md. Special Dispatch to The Star.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., November 80.—Mrs.

Charles Ernde and her two daughters-Gladys, aged seven, and Grace, aged eighteen years-are dead as the result of being terribly burned by a coal oil lamp exploding in the parlor of their home in Hagerstown last night.

Little Gladys was dead when the physiclans arrived. Mrs. Ernde and Miss Grace Ernde received their injuries largely through their efforts to save the little girl. Mrs. Ernde died early this morning and Miss Grace expired during the forenoon. There will be a triple funeral from the Ernde home tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Ernde and her daughters were seated about the parlor table and in some unexplained way the large lamp was overturned, fell upon little Gladys and the explosion fol-

Identifying Street Car Routes. the Editor of The Star:

In one or two of your recent issues I have read complaints of the administration of the Washington street car service made by your correspondents. The point particularly emphasized was the difficulty of ascertaining the exact route of the cars by the signs placed upon them or by their color. There is a very simple and effective remedy for this inconvenient defect, viz.: The numbering of the various routes, and the placing of the number in large black figures upon white ground upon and above the roof of each car, easily distinguishable for the distance of a block. There are some things that our neighbors across the water do much better than we do—and the management of street car traffic is one of them. In Belgium and Holland each route is numbered and its number indicated as above, and on large cards placed at the street stations and on smaller cards cated as above, and on large cards placed at the street stations, and on smaller cards for the pocket. The whole arrangement is very simple, practical and convenient. Re-turn tickets can also be purchased at a discount, as upon the steam roads. GEORGE ROCHFORD STETSON.
